ATTORNEY-GENERAL HART.

The Modesto Journal, a Democratic paper, pays the following high compliment to Attorney-General Hart, the Republican nominee: "The Republicans have nominated for the office of Attorney-General the present incumbent. If the honest and calm judgment of the people were to prevail at the ballot-box, free from party bias and prejudice, Mr. Hart would receive 30,000 majority on the day of election. Since his incumbency in office he has far exceeded the most sanguine expectations of his warmest friends. As a lawyer, thoroughly learned in all its branches, he has shown himself one of the young giants of the bar."

William Gouverneur Morris, the irrepressible, has been getting himself into trouble at Sitka, Alaska, where he is Collector of Customs. Serious charges against him have been lodged with the Secretary of the Navy by Commander Pearson, of the United States steamer Wachusett, stationed at Sitka, and by the Naval Secretary referred to the head of the Treasury Department. The charges include fraud upon the Government, drunkenness, abuse of natives, arbitrary conduct towards other Government officers, having business with him, and arbitrary and overbearing exercise of authority. These things are not surprising. Morris was bound to get into a ruction sooner or later, for he is a constitutional swash-buckler and chronic mischief-maker.

REPUBLICANS, bear in mind that on the result of the election in this State depends the election of a United States Senator two years hence, and do not fail to cast your ballots for the Republican Senatorial candidate. Elect Crank, who will go for a Republican successor to Jim Farley, and leave at home Del Val, who will vote to have Farley succeed himself.

THAT Stoneman is the railroad candidate we have the authority of the Democratic organ, the Examiner. All the squirming that his supporters may now do to get away from this naked fact will avail them nothing.

The Republican county ticket shows an array of honorable and efficient men, all of whom deserve election.

MEN AND WOMEN.

Ex-Governor J. J. Goyer of Arizona is at the Baldwin, San Francisco.

L. F. Moulton, a farmer of 20,000 acres in Colusa County, has been nominated for State Senator by the Republicans of Tehama and Colusa.

The fact that King Oscar of Sweden and Norway has had his life insured for six hundred thousand crowns, or about $162,000, before making his recent tour among his Norwegian subjects, excited much comment by its grim significance. Let us hope that the same discreditable Norwegian is steadily growing more and more serious. It is actively desired by no less important a man than Bjornsterne Bjornson, who makes a secret of his determination to overthrow the Bernadotte dynasty, and abolish the union between Sweden and Norway.

Dr. Pigeon, an Englishman who recently made a visit to the United States and wrote a book about it, entitled "An Engineer's Holiday," says in concluding his remarks: "I landed in America a prospective admirer of its people and institutions, and left it, after a five months' stay, charmed with the courteous kindness of its private citizens, astonished at the wealth and boldness of its public men, and convinced that, so far as power and prosperity are concerned, the great Republics are to be wayward, the foreseen nation of the modern world." But I think he is in error. The United States, I found politics a close interest and luxury rampant in most of the cities."

We are informed that a fare game is run at Wilmington, nightly, in an open saloon. This is a breach of law that requires the attention of the proper officers. The gamblers doubtless have no eye to the pockets of free-and-easy Jack Tar, whom they will of course victimize: umm mifflin if they get a chance. The heavy hand of the law needs to be laid upon them.

Mr. Ellwood Cooper, of Santa Barbara county, in a letter to Secretary Hewitt accompanying his exhibit at the District Fair (which has already been noticed in our local columns), relates his inability to personally attend the Fair. He is kept at home by his building operations, and by being in the midst of his walnut crop. He says his olive crop will be so large that he has had to put up new works for making oil. The almond crop ripened late. Among his exhibits are American chestnuts reproduced from Pennsylvania seed, and Pennsylvania beans, (second crop) the earliest bean that can grow in California, and a wonderfully prolific beaver. Were the opportunity favorable, Mr. Cooper, who is both a practical and scientific farmer, and a most thorough and successful one, could make a notable and varied exhibit. He has upon his ranch, "Ellwood," beautiful specimens of Cuzco corn, acclimated; suprb Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, tobacco, choice thoroughbred Alderney cattle, fine Berkshire hogs; eucalyptus trees by the hundred thousand, embracing twenty-four varieties; olives on the branches and olive oil in the mill; Sicily lemons, and all the temperate-climate fruits. Mr. Cooper has a noble estate, excellently managed.

INFORMATION from the Senatorial District composed of San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, is encouraging for the election of Judge Steele over J. M. Brooks, the Democratic nominee. It is estimated that Judge Steele will carry his own county, San Luis, by 200 majority, and Ventura by 100 majority. The Republican estimate for San Luis, which is a very doubtful county, may possibly be too high, but Ventura and Santa Barbara are clearly Republican and ought to be able to make up the deficiency, if any there be, in San Luis, thus rendering Judge Steele's calling and election secure. We hope so, for he is a man of exceptional excellence, and immeasurably superior to his opponent. The district will be well represented in the Senate if Judge Steele has that duty to perform.

The San Francisco Chronicle says: "The only time Stoneman displayed any activity since his election as Railroad Commissioner under the new Constitution, was when an attempt was made in the Legislature to cut off the appropriation for the support of the Commission. On that occasion the General hastened to Sacramento, and by efftive lobbying he managed to persuade the members to not endanger his salary by cutting off the appropriation for a temporarily useless body." So Stoneman has been misrepresented when accused of a lack of energy. In drawing his salary—two salaries, in fact—he has exhibited conspicuous energy.

Mr. S. D. WATERMAN, Republican candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, comes in for a very strong and unqualified endorsement from the Green castle (Ind.) Banner, a paper published at his old home. The Banner says that "Professor Waterman made a splendid record as an educator" while there, and that "he will discharge the duties of the office" for which he is running "in such a manner as to increase the efficiency of the schools, and at the same time awaken a new public interest in them." Mr. Waterman should be elected, and, per contra, his opponent, Wicker, should be defeated.

ENTER has exposed and denounced without stint or qualification the evils of the railroad contract system. Stoneman has complaisantly and supinely looked on without protest, while that people have been groaning under that insupportable burden imposed by that great monopoly. Which man is the friend of the people, and which the friend of the corporation?

A bad cause can only win because its advocates are united and desperate in earnest, and its opponents asleep or indifferent. Let it not be said, Republicans of Los Angeles county, that we lost the fight through our own supineness. Show the Democracy what a power in politics is a thoroughly aroused Republican party: Unite, fight and conquer!

REPUBLICANS, bear in mind that on the result of the election in this State depends the election of a United States Senator two years hence, and do not fail to cast your ballots for the Republican Senatorial candidate. Elect Crank, who will go for a Republican successor to Jim Farley, and leave at home Del Val, who will vote to have Farley succeed himself.

A Pretty Room and a Pretty Room—The Word to the Farmer—Stock-Breeding—For the Household.

Let the Cloth Be White.

Go set the table, Mary, an' let the cloth be white.
The hungry city children are comin' here to eat.
The children from the city, with features pinched an' spare, Are comin' here to get a breath of God's unsainted air.

They come from out the dungeons where they With want were chained;—From愁 and dismal, by tears of sorrow stained; From愁 and thundershadows are numbering all the light; Set well the table, Mary, an' let the cloth be white!

They ha' not seen the daisies made for the hearts' behoof.
They never heard the rain-drops upon a cottage.
They do not know the kisses of zepphyr an' of They never rambled wild an' free beneath the trees.

The food that they ha' eaten sated them;— The very air their lungs breathed was full of The human soul breathed was full o' wrong an' spite; So sit at the table, Mary, an' let the cloth be white!

The fragrant water lines never sated them;— They never picked a wild flower from off its leaves.

They never saw a greenward that they could safely pass.

Unless you heaved well the sign that says
"Keep off the grass."

God bless the men and women of noble brain and heart
Who work in the folk-walkin' an' take The children's part—Those cheery, cheery children, who place us in their hearts,
And never fail to give more pleasure than it requires.

Set well the table, Mary; let naught be spared or left small;—
The little ones are coming; have plenty for 'em.
There's nothing that would furnish except the
To the Lord that Jesus looked upon an' called to him an' blessed.

—WILL CARLTON.

A Pretty Room.

WHAT TASTE CAN BE IN SPITE OF THE HABITUAL TIMES.

A young working girl of this city, by the exercise of her innate good taste and putting every spare penny where it would do the most good, has furnished forth a charming room at comparative cheapness, which is both aesthetically aesthetic to please the most fastidious person. The floor painted by her own hands, is a dark walnut shade, partly covered by a large rug made of cheap ingrain carpet in a small pattern of cream and olive, bordered by a broad border of red. The walls are covered with a massive wall paper plain olive, flecked with pink, finished by a narrow olive frize, terminating at the corners with a cluster of four tiny pink fans. One window faces a dingy brick wall, and she painted the window-panes in bright colors, giving them a traced pattern, which gives a bit of stained glass quite effective in the pretty room. The other window is draped gracefully with long full folds of sprigged muslin, depending from rings on a chain, which is to be replaced in the winter with a hem of a cotton flannel. The furniture is light wood and a lamp with a rose transparency stands on a five o'clock tea table of unvarnished wood and thins, which also contains books, shelves of pins, a couple of second-hand easy chairs and a small dry goods box for shoes, covered by her own hands with pink and olive cretonne. A large clothes-horse, on which she pasted the story of Cinderella in Water Colors, pictures over the winter, a chair and a round washstand, draped with a portion of olive Canton flannel, contains the unesthetic dustpan, brooms other homely articles necessary to neatness and comfort—all trifles of that despicable sort. A pretty yellow working chair, ornamented with olive and pink ribbon, and a knitted hassock to match, the two latter Christmas gifts, stand on the rug. The old spool of thread and the old spool of material are grandma's Nankin teapot, two teacups and saucers, a pink gingham, not decorated, and spoilt in its pristine blue and white beauty, filled with white daisies gathered on Sunday afternoon walks. Two or three photographs of good subjects, that she took, too, hang on the wall and complete the pretty refuge of this proud and industrious girl, who is self-respecting enough to earn her own living rather than to be dependent upon her rich relations.

A Word to the Farmer.

The value of barn-yard manure, or any other fertilizer, is admitted by every farmer, and is the first article a farmer buys for his field.

But what is the value of productive land if you cannot sell the product? The great question after all, for the farmer, therefore, is the question of a market, and what is the market?

There are two markets for the farmer—the foreign market and the home market.

Which is the most desirable? Why, the home market, of course, because it is the sale of his products in the market that the farmer gets his money.

It is for that reason that the farmer can not sell in the home market

unless he can sell abroad.

Last year, for instance, more than $8,000,000,000 worth of agricultural products were exported, and the value of these products to the farmer, against less than $1,000,000,000 sent to a foreign market.

Every one of the 50,000,000 of our population consumed the average 1 year $100 worth of that which was produced by agriculture, and so far as we can see, cost less, hang on the wall and
complete the pretty refuge of this proud
and industrious girl, who is self-respecting enough to earn her own living rather than to be dependent upon her
rich relations.

home market.

Which is the most desirable? Why, the home market, of course, because it is the sale of his
products in the market that the
farmer gets his money.

It is for that reason that the
farmer can not sell in the home market

unless he can sell abroad.

Last year, for instance, more
than $8,000,000,000 worth of agricultural products were
exported, and the value of these products to the farmer, against less than $1,000,000,000 sent to a foreign market.

Every one of the 50,000,000 of our population consumed the average 1 year $100
worth of that which was produced by agriculture, and so far as we can see, cost less, hang on the wall and
complete the pretty refuge of this proud
and industrious girl, who is self-respecting enough to earn her own living rather than to be dependent upon her
rich relations.

—A word to the Farmer.

The value of barn-yard manure, or any other fertilizer, is admitted by
every farmer, and is the first article
a farmer buys for his field.

But what is the value of
productive land if you cannot sell the
product? The great question after all, for the farmer, therefore, is the question of a market, and what is
the market?

There are two markets for the farmer—the foreign market and the home market.

Which is the most desirable? Why, the home market, of course, because it is the sale of his
products in the market that the farmer gets his money.
